“The heart-wrenching and triumphal story of Harry and Jessie Webb, artists and lovers, took off during the 1950s beat generation in Vancouver with ground-breaking art; involvement in the jazz scene; struggles with limited income; the effect of post-war attitudes to women; and the contributions of Harry’s landscape architecture career.”

—Christina Johnson-Dean, author of
The Life and Art of Edythe Hembroff-Schleicher

“Harry and Jessie Webb’s work, a blending of abstraction with landscape, still life or figurative elements, is playful, yet very solid in composition. They echo Matisse and Picasso, who riffed off each other for decades.”

—Gregg Simpson, BC artist
